STATELESSNESS UPDATE

ABIDJAN DECLARATION: TWO YEARS DOWN THE LINE

West Africa celebrates the 2nd anniversary of the Abidjan Declaration on the eradication of statelessness. Over the last two years, the region achieved significant progress as illustrated below:

12 States have acceded to the 1954 CONVENTION

11 States have acceded to the 1961 CONVENTION

12 States have developed PLANS OF ACTION to end statelessness

7 States have begun a process to revise their NATIONALITY LEGISLATION

CELEBRATING THE 2ND ANNIVERSARY OF THE DECLARATION

In February, West Africa celebrated the 2nd Anniversary of the Abidjan Declaration, a regional commitment in support of the global campaign to end statelessness. Activities took place across the region, ranging from TV shows, University debates, press releases and visual campaigns. The region once again showed its support and enthusiasm towards the Declaration.

ECOWAS and UNHCR organised a high level panel in Abuja to celebrate the 2nd anniversary of the Abidjan Declaration. The 15 Ambassadors of the ECOWAS member states and international agencies attended the event. High Level ECOWAS officials underscored the importance of the Abidjan Declaration, and called upon States to make a step forward towards the eradication of statelessness by adopting a legally binding instrument. Great emphasis was also placed the necessity of regional cooperation, the most effective way to put an end to the scourge of statelessness in West Africa.

- In Senegal, the government and UNHCR issued a joint press release in which Senegal reinforced its commitment to end statelessness. On the date of the anniversary, one of the most popular TV channels in the country broadcasted a special show on statelessness presented by High Profile Supporter Aby Ndour. The program featured a discussion with UNHCR, parliament representatives, and artists such as Bideew Bou Bess and Cheikh Lo, on the causes of and solutions to statelessness.
- In Burkina Faso, messages on statelessness were sent to the general public via SMS in an effort to mass sensitize the population on the issue. In addition, UNHCR provided registration materials to the civil registry center in the Sahel region, where a large number of undocumented Malian refugees reside. The objective was to strengthen the capacity of the registration center while sensitizing both the authorities and the population on the risks of statelessness.
- In Ghana, UNHCR organized a series of awareness-raising activities targeting the media and the general public. A media forum on ‘Addressing Statelessness in the Ghanaian Context’ was attended by the BBC and other major media outlets. In the days leading up to the Anniversary, the issue of statelessness in Ghana was covered via radio, TV and print media. A debate organized by ‘Friends of UNHCR’ – a volunteer-based initiative aimed at engaging university students – took place among journalists and the general public on the issue of proof of nationality.
- In Côte d’Ivoire, UNHCR was engaged in a media campaign to sensitize the public about statelessness. UNHCR published a press release and launched a video on the national channel, RTI, which included appearances by various well-known Ivorian personalities.
- In Guinea-Bissau, the popular singer, Binham, helped to spread the message about statelessness during his 4 concerts in the towns of Bissau, Gabú and Bafatá. The singer, who has been increasingly supportive of UNHCR’s efforts, used his concerts advocate for eradicating statelessness and to distribute informational materials. His charisma and energetic performances were invaluable in assisting UNHCR to spread the message across Guinea-Bissau.

- In Guinea, the Committee to End Statelessness and UNHCR organized a visual campaign, by placing banners and posters in strategic points throughout Conakry and Nzérékoré, including at the airport, town halls, ministries, and at civil society organizations.
- In Ekpoma town, in southern Nigeria, the Faculty of Law at Ambrose Alli University celebrated the anniversary by presenting a seminar paper titled “The Eradication of Statelessness in West Africa: The Role of the United Nations High Commission for Refugees.” After the seminar, participants continued to sensitize students on statelessness.
- On 10 March 2017, Togo UNHCR held a meeting with government and civil society representatives to assess the current level of implementation of the Abidjan Declaration in Togo. The government adopted a roadmap, and prioritised two actions: the accession to both Conventions, and adoption, by decree, of the National Action Plan.

ABIDJAN COMMITMENTS TRANSLATED INTO ACTION

Developing national action plans – art. 24

- In Mali, the National Action Plan is getting closer to formal government approval. In March, The Statelessness Inter-ministerial Committee approved the plan drafted in 2014, which will now be submitted for Ministerial approval.
- In Guinea, progress is being made towards the approval of the national action plan, titled "Program to Combat Statelessness in Guinea". The Minister of Justice and Minister of State have passed on the National action plan to the General Secretariat of the Government for the President's signature.

Reducing statelessness – art. 18

In Mali, UNHCR, in partnership with a civil society partner assisted 600 stateless refugees originating from Mauritania to apply for Malian nationality through the process of naturalization. In addition, UNHCR organized a two-day workshop with the local authorities in the region of Timbuktu, north of Mali, on the nexus between preventing statelessness and strengthening civil registration. As a result of the discussions, participants developed a detailed plan of action on civil registration that will be incorporated in the national plan of action to end statelessness in Mali.

- In Liberia, the Government confirmed the nationality of 709 former Liberian refugees who still reside in their countries of asylum. After the cessation of their refugee status, they were vetted as non-Liberian by the authorities of their country, and were liable to becoming stateless. In 2016-2017, UNHCR supported a 3-member team from the Liberian government to undertake missions to 6 West African countries to review their cases. These 709 Liberians have been officially confirmed as nationals of their country.
- In Niger, the Diffa region is home to a large population of refugees and displaced persons. Up to 80 per cent of the population does not have any documentation establishing their identity and nationality. Similarly, a large percent of the host population has never had access to civil registration. In response to this dramatic deficit of documentation, UNHCR and the Government developed a joint project to administer a survey ('Recensement Administratif de Développement à Vocation Humanitaire') aimed at collecting individual data that will assist in the identification and documentation of people at risk of statelessness. Following a validation workshop with local authorities and humanitarian actors in February, the census and biometric registration activities are scheduled to take place in June 2017.
- In Côte d'Ivoire, in application of the special law on acquisition of nationality through declaration, the Ministry of Justice delivered nearly 1,000 nationality certificates between January and March 2017.
- In Senegal, authorities have issued over 300,000 late birth certificates since the Abidjan Declaration. A birth certificate is often sufficient in Senegal to obtain an ID and passport.

Regional- Radio France International (RFI) travelled to Abidjan and recorded its famous daily show ‘7 Milliard de Voisins’ with a larger public essentially composed of university students. Regional – On 03 February in Abidjan, the African Bank for Development (ABD) hosted the final of the regional competition Voice of Youth (“Voix des Jeunes”). Students from Guinea, Côte d’Ivoire and Senegal debated on statelessness and proposed innovative solutions on “how to address lack of proof of nationality”. Interesting ideas were shared and included promoting female leaders as well as traditional and religious authorities.

Senegal- For three weeks, the Afrikabok roving cinema festival passed through 13 villages in northern Senegal (at the border with Mauritania) to entertain and raise awareness of statelessness. In addition to screening videos on the theme, the organization stimulated discussions in local language (Pulaar) and distributed informative comic books. The project targets over 30,000 villagers and local officials. Learn more about Festival Afrikabok here.

Strengthening Regional Commitment

Senegal - 46 people from 17 African countries met in Dakar in January for a 5-day training. In addition, 40 participants were able to attend from Abidjan, Côte d'Ivoire, through videoconference. The 5-day training was organized jointly by UNHCR and the Agence Universitaire de la Francophonie (AUF). It brought together practitioners from governments and parliaments, UNHCR and civil society. The training aimed at sharing best practices and providing tools for the prevention and reduction of statelessness. Several participants undertook actions upon return to their countries. In the Republic of the Congo, participants organised a training for State-authorities involved in the issuance of birth certificates. In Chad, participants convened a workshop on Statelessness and Nationality to share the knowledge and skills obtained from the training with key national stakeholders.

Strengthening civil registration – art. 6

- In Senegal, a Presidential decree ordered the issuance of late birth certificates to be free of charge starting from February 2017. Before, the cost of a birth certificate was around CFA 700 in a country where over 20% of individuals, including 30% of children below the age of 5, do not have a birth certificate. A birth certificate is fundamental - although not sufficient in itself – to prove that a person meets the criteria for obtaining the Senegalese nationality.
- In Burkina Faso, the government in partnership with the private sector has been testing a new technology to enhance civil registration. The technology consists of a unique plastic chip, which is inserted into the bracelet of each new-born child and linked to a phone application that is used by mid-wives. With their phones, the mid-wives scan the baby's bracelet containing his/her biodata, which is automatically downloaded in all registry centers in the country making it easier for the acquisition of civil documents. The initial testing phase was concluded in January and the government is currently analyzing the possibilities for country-wide use.
- Côte d'Ivoire is currently reforming its civil code and developing a National Registration of Physical Persons (NRPP) platform, with the aim of issuing a unique ID number to every national and legal resident. Within this process, the government has undertaken a review of the Ivorian civil registration system. To this end, UNHCR participated in a government-organized workshop which brought together several experts engaged in the field of civil status.

Revising nationality laws – art. 2, 3

- In February, the Council of Ministers of Benin approved the draft bill modifying the nationality law. The draft bill has now reached the National Assembly, where it is yet to be adopted. The bill aims, among others, at removing discriminatory elements of the country's nationality law to ensure gender equality. It intends to give men and women the same rights to pass nationality to their children, as well as the same conditions to acquire, change or keep nationality.
- In Togo, the Global Campaign for Equal Nationality Rights organized an advocacy workshop on the removal of gender discrimination from national legislation on the 7th and 8th February. The workshop brought together government, UNHCR, civil society, and international experts, and was followed by a press conference (summary video on TV). The Nationality Code of Togo includes several discriminatory provisions that must be reformed to achieve gender equality. Two examples are the provisions that only permits mothers to confer nationality on children in cases where the father is stateless or his nationality is unknown; and that Togolese men may confer nationality to foreign spouses upon marriage, a right denied to Togolese women.

Improve information and data collection – art. 1, 15

- Studies mapping the landscape of statelessness are still ongoing in Benin, Gambia, Ghana, Mali and Nigeria.

ONLINE PLATFORMS

- Our 6 week-long Facebook campaign #1minute1million in support of #IBelong global campaign, has just finished. As part of the campaign, nine stateless people from five countries in West Africa shared their stories and reached an audience of more than 30,000 people. Gender discrimination, low rates of birth registration and violence against children were some of the issues that were covered. Take a look at our Facebook page if you haven't seen it yet!
