

The exodus of Venezuelan nationals is the largest in the recent history of Latin America and the Caribbean and has become the second largest international displacement crisis in the world. Of the approximately 5.4 million refugees and migrants from Venezuela globally, some 4.6 million are in Latin America and the Caribbean. By end of 2020, there were 850,818 pending asylum claims from Venezuelans worldwide and 171,793 Venezuelans recognized as refugees in the world. Some 2.6 million residence or regular stay permits have been issued to Venezuelans by Latin American countries. The rest are living in an irregular situation and exposed to greater risk of various forms of exploitation and abuse, due to limited access to rights, including national health, social welfare programmes and basic services

As a consequence of the pandemic, many refugees and others have lost their sources of income, which further hampers their ability to pay rent and buy food and other essentials, as medicine. Evictions, compounded by the closure of some shelters, led to a spike in homelessness which has further eroded public perceptions of refugees and migrants. In Latin America and the Caribbean, UNHCR works to support this population and fosters their access to rights, included to national vaccination programmes. UNHCR co-lead Inter-Agency efforts to respond to these challenges, addressed by the 2021 Refugee and Migrant Response Plan.

RESPONSE inside VENEZUELA

UNHCR operates in 2021 within the interagency framework of the Humanitarian Response Plan to assist the most vulnerable population groups inside the country. In addition to activities under the WASH and Education clusters, UNHCR also contributes operationally and as lead of two clusters: Protection as well as Shelter, Energy and non-food relief items (NFI).

In prioritized communities, particularly in border areas, UNHCR assistance helps address basic needs for vulnerable individuals through core relief items, including jerry cans, solar lamps, kitchen sets and hygiene kits. This assistance runs in parallel to support to reception capacities for spontaneous returns, taking place amid the pandemic, through capacity-building activities, the expansion of triage, medical and emergency shelter facilities, as well as hygiene and sanitation materials for frontline service providers.

UNHCR also works extensively with key institutions and community-based actors to strengthen access to rights through information, individual counselling and referrals. Legal assistance and psychosocial support are also made available to people with specific protection risks, including but not limited to survivors of violence and individuals at risk of statelessness. Community engagement remains a core feature of UNHCR activities, mobilizing networks across prioritized communities to strengthen grassroots efforts for access to rights, peaceful coexistence, and now public health risks.
